

Dear Customer,

We hope that your ants arrived safely. We have supplied worker ants from species Lasius niger (common black ant) which adapt very well to the conditions in Ant World.

Your ants were posted first class. The few hours they have spent in transit should not harm them. However, delays in the postal system may result in a number of casualties; should this happen, contact Interplay by phone or email for a replacement and please do not put any of the remaining ants into your Ant World.

How to get your ants into Ant World.

Before you introduce your ants to their new home, carefully set up the Ant World as explained in the manual.

Attach the container to Ant World using the small length of tubing provided with the kit. Ants can move quickly, so be careful when removing the end cap from the container and do not open the lid unless you really need to.

Initial Care

Your ants prefer to live in the dark. Use the shades provided in the new version of the kit or alternatively an old magazine, draped over the Ant World serves as a very effective blackout curtain.

Please do not over-feed your ants. A very small piece of apple, banana or any sweet fruit once a week is ideal. If you notice food is being left uneaten you are probably giving them too much and you should reduce the quantity. You'll soon get the hang of it.

Your ants should soon start digging and landscaping, providing many hours of fascinating entertainment. Should you have any problems or interesting comments, please do not hesitate to contact us.

Thank you for your custom.
