Fruity & Easy-drinking

The Grosjean family traces its roots back to the village of Fornet in the high mountain passes of the Valle d'Aosta, Italy's smallest wine region, known as Valgrisenche where they raised cattle and made wine since 1969. Sustainable farming techniques have been in place since 1975: only organic fertilizers are applied and no pesticides or herbicides are used. Today, the winery is run by the third generation: four brothers working together and making some of the most exciting wines in this tiny and magical region.

The Petite Arvine varietal is originally from Switzerland but jumped the border to reveal a personality that is as strong as it is charming. Graced with notes of preserved white fruits, peach syrup and a touch of nutmeg, the wine remains dry and easy-drinking thanks to balanced acidity, all the while being mouth-filling and flavourful. A sure delight paired to grilled salmon filet with peach-tomato chutney.

About the Winery

Grosjean

The Grosjean family traces its roots back to the village of Fornet in the high mountain passes of the Valle d'Aosta, Italy's smallest wine region, known as Valgrisenche where they raised cattle and made wine since 1969. Grosjean produces stunning high altitude wines from indigenous varieties such as Petit Rouge, Doucet and Fumin as well as international varieties such as Gamay, Chardonnay, Pinot Noir and Pinot Grigio.

Sustainable farming techniques have been in place since 1975: only organic fertilizers are applied and no pesticides or herbicides are used. Natural yeasts are utilized for fermentation.

Today, the winery is run by the third generation: four brothers working together and making some of the most exciting wines in this tiny and magic region.
