

One of the most important effects that makes distinctive the sound of the guitar in the 80's, is for sure the Chorus.. Able to make a decent clean sound become wonderful, lush and ethereal, and it has been really a milestone in the history of music. At that time, they were analog, noisy and signal suckers pedals, even if they sounded so good. Starting with the idea to revive exactly that typical sound made famous by great units like the Boss CE-1 and CE-2, we kept the circuit totally analog and worked to design it to be super quiet, to not suck signal in any frequency, and to have a better response even on the Low frequency range, make it sounding great even for bass.

As for the other Foxgear pedals, the Ballade has Standard Audio-grade components in the audio path, (no SMD) and it is equipped with our own anti-pop, relay assisted true bypass circuitry.
