Natural wine is a type of wine that is produced using simple or traditional methods as part of a movement among winemakers. While there is no standard definition of natural wine, it is generally made without the use of pesticides, herbicides, and with few or no additives. Typically, natural wine is produced on a small scale using traditional methods instead of industrial ones, and is fermented using only native yeast. It is also unfinned and unfiltered, and often uses minimal effective SO<sub>2</sub>, allowing the wine to express the terroir and the grape variety with minimal intervention.
