The Lunch Spill

We were having lunch at the benches at school. Joey was eating fried chicken. He offered me some, but I said, "No, thank you." He offered some fried chicken to Jane. Jane did want fried chicken. When she went to grab it from him, she knocked over my juice. It spilled everywhere. Juice poured off the table. Clearly, it damaged my lunch sack. Joey claimed it was his fault. Jane claimed it was her fault. "We are so sorry, Logan," they said. We cleaned the table together. "It's ok. At least it did not get on my..Oh no! It's on my shirt!" I said. I rubbed and rubbed my shirt with my napkin, but the stain was still there. Joey offered to buy me another shirt. "That is so kind, but I am sure it will wash out," I said.

I have started using these weekly in my classroom to help with fluency and reading comprehension. My students get excited to color in the smiley faces, and it teaches them the importance of reading things more than once. Love the variety of options with various pre/suffixes.
